ErrandHubb Launches a New, Affordable Way to Get Everyday Errands Done

New online marketplace connects people who need help with everyday tasks directly with independent “Erranders,” offering a simpler and more affordable alternative to traditional service platforms.

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — August 25, 2026 — ErrandHubb, an innovative online marketplace designed to connect people who need everyday errands and services completed with independent workers ready to earn money, is preparing to introduce a new approach to the rapidly growing gig and local-services economy.

Built around the idea of making it easier and more affordable for people to find help, ErrandHubb.com allows customers to connect with local independent service providers, known on the platform as Erranders, for a wide variety of everyday needs.

From shopping, deliveries and transportation assistance to cleaning, moving help, senior assistance and other everyday services, ErrandHubb is designed to bring multiple categories of local help together in one easy-to-use marketplace.

A Simpler Alternative

Consumers today have access to numerous apps and websites for hiring people to perform individual services. However, the costs associated with service fees, memberships, commissions and other charges can add up quickly for both customers and workers.

ErrandHubb was created with a different philosophy: keep the platform simple, keep costs low, and give customers and Erranders more control over who they work with.

Rather than limiting users to a single type of service, ErrandHubb is designed as a broad marketplace where customers can search for workers or post errands based on the type of help they need.

Customers can review available Erranders, learn about the services they provide and communicate before making a hiring decision.

Giving Independent Workers Another Way to Earn

ErrandHubb is also being developed with the independent worker in mind.

Millions of Americans earn additional income through gig work, delivery services, freelance work and local service platforms. ErrandHubb gives these workers another marketplace where they can advertise their skills and connect with people who need their services.

Erranders can create detailed profiles describing the services they provide, their experience, availability and other information that can help customers decide who they would like to hire.

One of ErrandHubb's distinctive profile features is the ability for Erranders to include YouTube video presentations alongside photos. These videos give potential clients an opportunity to see and hear from an Errander before making a hiring decision. Erranders can introduce themselves, discuss their experience, explain the types of services they offer, or even provide videos showing themselves actually performing various types of errands and services.

By combining traditional profiles with video, ErrandHubb allows Erranders to showcase their personality, professionalism and abilities while giving clients additional information and confidence when deciding who they want to hire.

The company's goal is to create a marketplace where independent workers have greater flexibility while customers have greater choice.

“Getting Your Errands Done ASAP”

ErrandHubb's mission can be summarized by its slogan:

“Getting Your Errands Done ASAP.”

The company believes that many everyday tasks do not require a specialized company—they simply require finding a reliable person who is available and willing to get the job done.

Whether someone needs groceries picked up, an item delivered across town, assistance around the house, help moving something, or another everyday task completed, ErrandHubb intends to make finding that person easier.

Building a National Marketplace

The company's vision is to develop a nationwide community consisting of hundreds of thousands—and eventually millions—of customers and independent Erranders.

As the platform grows, ErrandHubb plans to continue adding features designed to make finding, communicating with and hiring local service providers easier.

About ErrandHubb
